

Information Poster: The three branches of the US government

Three branches, one shared government

The US federal government is divided into three branches. Each branch has its own job and shares power with the others.

1. Legislative makes laws in Congress

2. Executive carries out laws as President

3. Judicial decides if laws are fair